

Ross Murray lives on the Canada-U.S. border in Stanstead, Quebec, where he was editor/publisher of the weekly Stanstead Journal. He went on to write an award-winning humour column for The Sherbrooke Record and also recorded a bi-weekly radio piece for “Breakaway” on CBC’s Quebec Community Network. He has published three collections of his humour and two Beaverly novels, A Hole in the Ground (2016) and Smileyville (2023). Also a playwright, Ross directed his original comedy All Together Now for Borderline Players in 2019 and Bride of Memphre in 2023. His work has also appeared at McSweeneys, Points in Case, Font Magazine, Havehashad and elsewhere.