

Forget saving the world—she’s just trying to survive dating apps.

Join author S.E. Linn on a wild and hilarious journey through the chaotic world of online dating in her new memoir, "Adventures in Online Dating."

From the cringe-worthy encounters with a man and his cat-hair-covered adult toy, to the emotionally unavailable "Viking" with a wife and spa plans, this book is a rollercoaster ride of modern love. But amidst the laughter and relatable moments, lies a cautionary tale of the dangers of swiping right.

Meet the fearless and unapologetic main character as she navigates the treacherous waters of online dating, armed with biting wit and brutal honesty.

If you’ve ever said, “there are no normal men left,” or Googled "how to exit a date without faking your death," this book will make you feel grateful for never going on that second date.

And for those who have survived the trials of dating apps, you will feel less alone and less likely to respond to that guy holding a fish.

If I ever decided to write my own tales of online dating, they'd read almost exactly like this book. Every awkward message, mismatched date, and catastrophic coffee meetup felt like déjà vu — equal parts hilarious and painfully relatable. The author has somehow taken all the cringe and chaos of modern dating and spun it into pure gold, and I absolutely loved every page."

This book is fantastic, loaded with some very funny stories and situations. It reminds you how strange people can be especially when you are only just meeting them. There were some stories I could relate to and others that were so crazy I couldn't stop laughing. Stories are short, quick and get strange quickly which makes for very entertaining reading!
